

Nikki Leigh is relishing the chances she is being given through her apprenticeship at A&P Falmouth and would urge anyone looking for a career to consider an apprenticeship.

Nikki's apprenticeship, which she began last August, sees her studying for a CIPS Level 4 Diploma in Procurement and Supply.

"I would recommend A&P to anybody who is looking for an apprenticeship in this industry," she said.

"Talking to long-standing members of staff and learning how many of them started as apprentices has made me appreciate how much opportunity for growth there is here within all of the roles.

"I enjoy my role and it's a new learning curve for me. I also enjoy the industrial environment we're in.

Last week I was given a tour of one of the vessels we're doing a major refit on and that's an opportunity I never would have gotten if I worked elsewhere. It really helped my understanding of how my role impacts the rest of the yard.

"A&P has a long-standing history in Falmouth. Its good reputation is based on the quantity of people it has employed."
